REVENUE INTELLIGENCE FOR E-COMMERCE

Your Ads Report Revenue. Your Store Tells a Different Story.

We reconcile what Meta & Google report as revenue versus what Shopify actually collects — so you know your true ROAS.

REPORTED VS TRUE ROAS

The Revenue Gap Nobody Talks About

Ad platforms report every purchase event as revenue. But Shopify only deposits what's actually collected — after refunds, chargebacks, discounts, and failed payments are subtracted.

■ ■ The Result: Inflated ROAS

When you optimize campaigns based on reported ROAS, you're making decisions with phantom revenue — money that Meta says you earned but never actually hit your bank account. You could be scaling a campaign that's losing money while thinking it's profitable.

Where Revenue Leaks Come From

Refunds & Returns

Products returned after purchase still count as revenue in ad platforms

8–12%

Discount Codes

Meta tracks full-price AOV, ignoring discount codes applied at checkout

5–8%

Chargebacks & Fraud

Disputed and reversed charges are counted as conversions

3–5%

"We were reporting 4.2x ROAS to our client. After a Calyxra audit, the true number was 2.8x. Two of their 'best' campaigns were actually breakeven."
